

Airport security still lacks force

Paul Maley | March 19, 2009

Font Size: Print Page:

Article from: THE AUSTRALIAN

MORE than three years after a government review found major gaps in aviation security, police numbers at Australian airports remain well below strength.

The Police Federation of Australia yesterday said low police numbers and divided responsibility between the states and commonwealth was putting commuter and public safety at risk.

Federation president Mark Burgess said the number of sworn police guarding Australia's major airports remained 35 per cent below the target set by the Council of Australian Governments in 2005.

"We (also) understand the numbers have deteriorated further since June 2008," Mr Burgess said. "In other words, the major airports are understaffed with sworn police by a staggering 35 per cent or more."

The claim was contained in the federation submission to the Transport Department's green paper into the aviation sector.

Mr Burgess said as of June last year, 233 state and territory police officers had been seconded to Australia's airports -- 124 short of the 2005 COAG commitment and 101 short of a subsequent reviewed commitment. Furthermore, the federation has been receiving anecdotal reports that the number of police at the airports has declined since then.

Under the Unified Policing Model to safeguard Australia's airports, state and territory police are seconded to the Australian Federal Police, who have overall responsibility for airport security.

The arrangement was the product of the 2005 review into aviation security conducted by British expert John Wheeler, who found the AFP lacked the manpower to guard the airports.

The Howard government had commissioned Sir John to review airport security after reports in The Australian exposed major breaches at Sydney airport.

Yesterday, the AFP acknowledged a shortfall but said it was working with the states to raise a full complement of officers.

AFP aviation national manger Roman Quaedvlieg said the target was to have 328 officers in Australia's airports. "There are around 40 officers either in training or scheduled to undergo training by the end of the financial year -- about half the total shortfall," Assistant Commissioner Quaedvlieg told The Australian.

Mr Burgess said the crux of the problem was the model of so-called "shared responsibility" of airport security. The actual effect had been "divided responsibility", with no one level of government taking responsibility.

"This failure, after three years of implementation of the COAG 2005 agreement, leaves our major airports exposed to risks or crime and terrorism," he said.

The federation argued that the shared-responsibility model diminished the resources of the states and territories. "The arrangement depletes the states and territories of experienced sworn police officers and means that they have to recruit from far and wide, including recruiting from overseas police forces."

But Assistant Commissioner Quaedvlieg said the states had committed to providing the agreed complement of officers.

"Our negotiations with the states have been productive and fruitful, and we hope to have the full complement by the end of the calendar year."

Mr Burgess said that morale was also an issue: "It's probably not an overly exhilarating place to work."

Share This Article

Email To A Friend

From here you can use the Social Web links to save Airport security still lacks force to a social bookmarking site.

del.icio.us
 Digg it
 Furl
 Netscape
 Yahoo MyWeb
 StumbleUpon
 Google
 Technorati
 BlinkList
 Newsvine

LATEST NATIONAL SECURITY

- Debus in backflip over AFP staff cuts
- Airport security still lacks force
- Hello sailor: the fleet's in town
- Donaldson: SAS hero to return to front line
- Rudd seeks food, oil ties with Iraq
- Rapid security issues shift to Afghanistan

Wow! MY Cap Mobile Plans

Use your ENTIRE cap on international calls or just some of it
Each MY Cap Plan comes with data included.

Ads by Google™

Australian Govt Hotline

Signs Of Terrorism? Report It Now 24hr National Security Hotline
www.NationalSecurity.gov.au

Altitude @ DSD

Defence Signals Directorate (DSD) Now recruiting graduates - online www.dsd.gov.au

Australian Government

Apply Online For World Class Service & Great Rewards With Amex.
www.americanexpress.com/australia

YOUR VOTE

The Australian's Online Poll
What do you think of the three-year jail sentence for ex-judge Marcus Einfeld for lying?

Vote | Your details | Map »

SPECIAL REPORTS

In-Depth sections

The Australian's in-depth sections cover a range of news topics, including the Queensland elections, the Victorian bushfires, the global financial crisis and our Investor Jury.

The Australian's In-Depth sections »

DIGITAL EDITIONS OF THE AUSTRALIAN

Subscribe to our digital editions.

More Digital Editions »

Hawaii hotel deals

Your holiday just got closer at Expedia. Book now and get FREE nights

60 minute home loans

Get a completed home loan (including paperwork) in one hour or less.

Savings Maximiser

Variable introductory rate, currently 4.75% p.a.

A smarter way to bank

AMP First offers 4.35% p.a.* and easy access to your money. Apply now.

Better Odds at Betfair

Get 20% better odds on your racing and sports bets at www.betfair.com

Vaalia yoghurt 2 wk trial

When you feel good on the inside, it shows. Find out more here.

Live life at a great rate

Get back to basics with a low everyday rate on purchases

Youi Car insurance saving

It's a smarter way that saves you money. You interested? youi.com.au

Northern Territory Events

Visit the outback & take in a wide range of cultural and sporting events!

New Dell Studio 15 Range

Click Here for the Perfect Balance of Power and Mobility

RSS FEEDS

-  Opinion
-  Business
-  Media
-  Higher Ed
-  The Arts
-  Property
-  The Nation
-  Sport
-  Travel
-  Defence
-  Aviation
-  Mining & Energy

More Feeds & Explanation »

IN THE AUSTRALIAN TODAY

BUSINESS

Broker banned over Macquarie rumours

Allison Jackson THE corporate watchdog has banned a broker for the first time under "rumourtrage" laws after spreading false rumours about Macquarie.

- Obama warns US still faces risks
- Sigma rises on modest outlook

AUSTRALIAN IT

Audits to test internet figures

Lara Sinclair THE print circulation watchdog is cracking down on inflated internet audience claims by launching a web auditing service.

- Telecomms: Cash found for national alert system
- Censorship: Internet filter list of porn exposed

MEDIA

Audits to test internet figures

Lara Sinclair THE print circulation watchdog is cracking down on inflated internet audience claims by launching a web auditing service for traffic.

- Heart is still set on media
- Newsreaders who survived in TV

HIGHER EDUCATION

Uni rejects demand for Muslims' prayer room

Milanda Rout AUSTRALIAN universities are responsible for providing quality education, not consecrated religious spaces, a university says.

- Overseas student intake up
- Campuses to chase unmet demand

ALSO IN THE AUSTRALIAN

THE WORLD

Video lifts hopes on hostages in Iraq

Deborah Haynes | 9:44am HOPES are growing for Britain's five "forgotten" hostages in Iraq after the emergence of a video indicating they are alive and well.

- US must have Afghan 'exit strategy'
- Plane crashes in Montana killing 17

THE NATION

Swan braces for shrinking economy

Christian Kerr | 10:15am WAYNE Swan has admitted a period of negative growth will be virtually impossible to avoid, as Kevin Rudd leaves for crisis talks.

- Body of Mathew Hopkins to come home
- Bligh begins health system shakeup

OPINION

Doubts dog mongrel party's future role

Glenn Milne Anna Bligh can probably rely on the dysfunctional LNP to keep her in power for a long time.

- Bruce Hawker: Bligh pressed home her jobs advantage
- Wayne Swan: G20 central to solution

LIFESTYLE

Surf side story

FOR a pastime that is so individualistic and introspective, surfing has inspired some crazily expansive thinkers. While other sports cre...

- Restaurateurs give Quay boss a serve
- Bypassing the glass ceiling